

THE LEXINGTON CAUCASIAN AND INDEPENDENT NOVEMBER 9, 1867.

Caucasian and Egyptian.

GANE AWAY.

BY GENE W. THOMAS.

From the New Orleans Sunday Times.
We've suffered many sicknesses today.
The greater portion of us are well,
And the winter's come.
But we're not all well; some are dead,
And some are dying.

A thousand lights are here,
But a thousand have gone.

Are we glad the warline leaves?

The shade of gloom is over us;
The sun has set, and the stars are bright.
When I last saw you, there was But a few who were well.

With a smile, you said, "I'm well,
But I wish the day would come.

Now, when the day has come,
There's no light left in me.

This is the last time I see you,

With bright eyes, and a smiling face;

We'll part, but we'll meet again,

With a smile, and a happy heart.

But we're not all well; some are dead,

And some are dying.

Water that will not drown.

All travelers, who a courageous heart have mentioned with interest, about the peculiar beauty of the Great Salt Lake, and it is truly surprising. No danger of shipwreck need ever cross the mind of those who navigate the lake, for it would be simply impossible for him to sink, if thrown over board.
With my hands clasped together under my head, and my feet crossed, I floated on the surface of the lake with at least one-third of my body above the surface of the water. Upon a warm summer day, there would be no difficulty in going to sleep on the lake, and allowing yourself to be blown about as the wind pleased. One would need nothing to keep off the rays of the sun. No fear of the water should omit the bath; the circulation in the water is most invigorating, and leads one to think himself floating in the air.

On the way back to the city, it will be well for the bather to stop at the sulphur baths just outside of the town, and remove the saline irritations which will have formed up on his skin by a plunge into the fine swimming bath, whose only objection is its peculiar odor and its great heat, which requires a large adventure of cool water.

Extract from Sambo's Sermon.

"Strive and do well, and narrow arm of God which leadeth to glory."

Brother Jones—In a man's life denies in coming to have done and had it splashed and mortified to you; yes you are; I am told to split it clear as the light of day. We are all wings down hill now; it's a fair my brother, and I tell you how it com-You see.

Adam was de-fine.

He was de-fine, and had to be his brother.

Adam and Eve were both black men so was Cain an Able. Now, I pose it seems to strike your understanding how do firs white men can do? Why let you no. Don ya see when Cain kill brother, de mass can an easy. "Cane what you brother Able?" Cain say, "I dout know, mass." He was going an say, "Cane what you brother Able?" Cane say, "I don't know, mass. But do nigga hole all de time. Massa now git mad, cum gin peak mighty sharp dis time. "Cane, whar ya brother Able, ya nigga?" Cain now git fren-an he tan white; an dis is de way fis white man cum on dis airtial! an it had not been for dat dar nigga, Cane, we'd nob be all trouble wif dis assay wites pon de face of dis circum-lar globe.

Now sing de forty-leventh hymn, tistular meter. Brother Jones, de susser.

A book entitled Thieves of the War, is soon to be issued. Wonder who it is that now proposes to write a history of the Butler family.
